Instructions

UPDATED May 2019

- Use a Google Doc that you find linked in the table below.
- Comments to the paper should be classified as type A (style, typos and the like) or B (clearness of the discussion, real or apparent flaws or inconsistencies in the analysis, or in the description of the analysis, ...).
- Each reviewer should enter the comments, in the two classes above, sorted by line number.
- As Google Docs allow multiple users to work in parallel, everyone can enter his comments in the proper order.
- You are encouraged to suggest modifications to the paper, if you feel they are needed, in a propositive form (i.e. refrain from just saying "this should be modified", but make a suggestion about what should be changed if you would like to be of help to the authors).
- Check publication guidelines if you are unsure of whether a comment is applicable (the guidelines are very instructive and there is a lot to learn about "writable and unwritable" in papers)
- At the end of the process, the senior reviewer is invited to make the comment style uniform, drop irrelevant comments, resolve any possible conflict between comments from the different readers.
- The final version should be circulated to the group, for verification, before submission
- When ready, one of the reviewers (normally the senior one) will submit the comments in CDS on behalf of the group.
- The review should be posted as a 'comment' to the paper, indicating clearly that this was a CMS Institutional Review from Milano-Bicocca.
- To post a comment, you visit the paper link and click on 'Detailed Record'. This gives you access to the full paper and one of the links at the bottom says 'Submit a comment'.
